David Allen is a classically-trained music composer from the north-east of England. He was a music scholar at the University of Oxford before continuing on to be awarded a distinction in composition for screen from the Royal College of Music in London. David combines acoustic instruments and orchestras with electronic and synthesised sounds to give each score a unique feel. Working mainly in film, he also composes for theatre plays, adverts, as well as non-screen projects, and is an emerging name in choral music as well as a professional pianist, organist and conductor.
