Experience:

I have been working as a freelance filmmaker and photographer for many years now. In this time I have directed over ten short films and one feature for which have won many awards and a full scholarship to Brighton Film School. I left school with A grades in A Level English, History, Government and Politics, Film Studies and Photography and with a distinction in Advanced History. I went on to study history at University College London before leaving early to pursue my filmmaking full time. I am very proficient at editing in Final Cut Pro and colouring with Color and I have my own Mac running Final Cut Studio. I'm well acquainted with a large range of cameras and own a Canon 7D with a selection of prime lenses and a Canon AH-X1. I have experience shooting documentaries and was the camera operator and DoP on Emmy award-winning director, Stephen Trombley's, latest documentary "Session Singers". I have also worked freelance for Smirnoff shooting their Nightlife Exchange Club Project and have shot event videos for UGroove TV. As well as my filming I also run a photography business shooting weddings, parties and also portrait photography. I have very good time-management and a quick turnaround. I'm used to working as part of a team and have been the Director of Photography on many other director's short films as well as my own projects. In my line of work I have had to learn to work with people of all ages and this has really developed my people skills. Having to keep to tight budgets and work to strict deadlines has led to me being very efficient and time-effective and able to keep my cool in pressured situations. Overall I love what I do and it is this drive and enthusiasm which makes me push myself and forces me to see every new project as an opportunity to out-do myself.
