Personal Profile

I am an experienced and versatile Cameraman, Director of Photography and Filmmaker with wide-ranging experience in factual programming, in arts, natural history, culture and history documentaries. I've made films for National Geographic Television, NHK Japan, Sky, the BBC and Channel 4. I have a strong grasp of narrative storytelling, a great 'eye' and enjoy filming and directing story-lead programming.

I also work in non-broadcast production, including large-scale projections for museum, exhibitions and cultural institutions around the world, including clients in the US, Africa and the Middle East. I have worked for many large, international organisations including the World Bank and UNESCO, as well as the governments of the UAE, Egypt, Portugal and the UK.

Equipment

I specialise in the Red Epic 5K camera system. I've owned Red Cameras for five years and used them to shoot drama, corporate films, media installations and commercials. I've put them through just about everything; from Summer in the deserts of Abu Dhabi (+46C / 100% humidity) to Winter in the ice fields of Norway (-27C). I take footage right through the production process, from the shoot into the edit and grade, and have developed a real understanding of the camera's capabilities as well as realistic sense of its pitfalls and limitations. I also run training and mentoring courses on Red camera and workflow for individuals and organisations, including Bristol University and media organisations in Sudan, Uganda and the UK.
